Mahayana History

The Chan movement began in China around the sixth century. Chan is Chinese for the Sanskrit word dhyana, meaning "meditation" and is better known by the Japanese pronunciation zen. Chan acted as a kind of post-graduate movement in Chinese Buddhism, functioning to help all the accomplished scholarly monks from the various doctrinal schools free themselves from attachments to specific descriptions of the truth.

Chan above all emphasized actual personal experience of the dharma and of bodhisattva awareness and activity, in one's own life. In this tradition, such experience is usually entered into through sitting meditation practice, mindful attention to practice of everyday activities, and checking one's practice and understanding with awakened teachers and their traditions.

While being greatly influenced by... Mahayana sutras... Chan developed its own voluminous body of literature, largely built on the dialogues and encounters of the great masters of the "golden age" of Chan in the Tang Dynasty of China in the eighth to ninth centuries with many subsequent commentaries...

Much of their humorous and paradoxical manner derives from native Chinese Taoism, although their teachings clearly are expressions of the traditional Mahayana texts...

The Hartford Street Zen Center has availability for practice resident students. We are looking for individuals interested in and committed to experiencing residential practice at a small, urban temple. Ideally applicants would have prior experience with full-time residential Buddhist community practice. Attendance to zazen, study group, ceremonies and teachings/lessons has requirements and should be of strong interest to be living at hszc. While participation and assistance in the daily events of the sangha are expected of any potential practice resident, it is our expectation that most residents are employed outside of the center (you must be able to pay your monthly tuition without exception, on time), we are accommodating toward Programs offered to the Public.

Donations are tax deductible

Chinese new year 2016 February

transcribed by sangha -

Words from our Abbot, Rev Myo Lahey:

The practice of zazen can teach us that the entire universe is bits and pieces. And whole. I would suggest that there isn't anything more precious than that.
